

Reflections #17: The Potter

short meditations on scripture intersecting life

*As the clay is in the potter's hand, so are you in my hand.
Jeremiah 18:6*

I have a college friend who has started a second career. She is an artist, more specifically a sculptor, or potter. Recently she posted pictures of some of her work online. I studied her nature sculptures of rabbits, loons, owls, and a cheerful little bird—I think it was a Carolina wren.

Block of unformed clay

Now we don't live close to each other, so I haven't seen her at work, but I can imagine her hands sculpting a big lump of clay into exactly the form that she wants it to take. Sharp tools are needed to add intricacies of form and personality. As I zoomed in on the photos I could see all the amazing detail work that gives life to each of her pieces.

To hear the rest of this podcast as we discuss being the clay in the Potter's hands, listen by simply clicking on the arrow below. You can also subscribe to the podcast on iTunes so it's delivered to your podcast library every week.

What Do You Think?

Finally, what are your thoughts on the process of being clay in the Potter's hands? How is God shaping you today? Leave your thoughts in the comment section below.

My friend's work

Thanks for listening! May your soul's meditations be fuel for Spirit-led actions today.

Jane