

You Are Complete!

Do you have days or months or maybe your life (!) where you feel scattered and fragmented, pulled in 100 different directions?

Perhaps the last thing you feel is complete, like you have life under control.

Well, that's because in reality, we don't! But I know someone who does, and He has the perfect promise for us.

I love the verse in Colossians 2: 10 that says "and you are complete in Him, who is the head of all principality and power." What does the word complete mean? In the Greek pleroo, it means "to make full, to abound, to be liberally supplied, to fill to the top, to carry out some undertaking." Notice it doesn't say perfect!

What this means to me is that in the midst of my scattered, fragmented life, Jesus has made me complete for what He is calling me to right now.

Right now I possess everything I need to step out and do what He wants me to do. I don't have any excuses. Gulp. Maybe like me you've heard God calling you to start something, but you're waiting for someone with far more wisdom and gifts to step up.

Maybe you're waiting until ... your kids are grown, you get that degree, you're in shape or your health is better.

The truth is that if God has put a call on your heart, then He's waiting for you to get started now. Yes, there are times for waiting and resting and learning, but if you feel that continual nudge to do something, then you need to step out and be obedient. He's made you complete where you are for what He has you to do, and He will provide for your lack with resources and other people as you're obedient to Him.

I'm there myself today. I've felt a nudge to be involved in an outreach ministry that I've kept putting off. I know it's time. What's on your heart today? Let's take that step together.

Pray on!
