

The Sacred Everyday No. 1: An Answered Prayer

I am excited to post my first Sacred Everyday moment. If you're not sure exactly what I'm talking about, read this post and you'll understand.

Today I signed on to Facebook and was greeted by this post from my son.

So I was on the way to access the other day and I just started praying, then randomly God was just like "hey dude get baptized," and I was like WORD! So yeah I'm absolutely stoked to say I'm getting baptized! And I believe it will be Sunday January 5th! So be there if you love meh 😊 — with Amber Miller and 3 others.

Baptism Class Registration - Adults - Nov 17 2013 9:00AM

Congratulations on making the decision to be baptized! We are excited to be a part of this important moment in your life. I will see you at your class where you'll get lots of information about the baptism process, what to do, what you need to bring, etc. But if you have any questions, please email me.

I look forward to meeting you!

I was staring at a full-fledged answer to prayer. I had been praying for my son for many years, and right in front of my eyes for all the world (at least Facebook world) to see was this post. Yeah! God is good. And I hadn't even been bugging Jesse about getting baptized. I was quiet and let God be God and work in his life. Galatians 6:9 flitted across my mind as I held my own little happy-dance party:

"So let's not get tired of doing what is good. At just the right time we will reap a harvest of blessing if we don't give up." (NLT)

God collided this Sacred Everyday moment right into my everyday, and I didn't even have to look to find it!

What about you? Have you noticed a Sacred Everyday today? Please share it below, as momentous or as everyday as it may be. We never know where or when the two will intersect.

Pray on!
